TRINITY CHURCHYARD was purchased from William Beverley in the year 1750 by the Church wardens on behalf of the Vestry of Augusta. Parish.

Yet for thirteen years longer services according to the Church of England use were held in the Courthouse because there was no church building in the little town. At length, on May 20, 1760 the Vestry unanimously agreed that a church be built in Staunton on the ground laid off for that purpose to be 40 feet by 25 feet, of "brick laid in lime," the work to be done "in a Beautiful Fashionable and Workmanlike manner." The contract shows that the chancel was at the east end of the church and the gallery at the west end; there is also specified that the pulpit must have a canopy and the chancel two windows and a chancel rail. We know from tradition that the main entrance was in the south wall. The Vestry accepted, on November, 1760, the bond of Francis Smith Gent of Hanover County with Wm. Preston and Charles Lewis Gentn for building a church in Staunton. The church was not completed, however, for nearly three years; then on June 25, 1763 the Vestry met in order to "view and receive the Church off the hand of the undertaker."

According to the testimony of an aged carpenter who, as a boy, assisted in the work of demolition, the old colonial church was not torn down when the second parish church was finished in 1832.

The Washington Oak planted by the Beverley Manor Chapter in the northwest corner of the churchyard stands a little in the rear of the site of the second church. Of this edifice little is known beyond such details as that it possessed entrance steps, a cupola, and "blinds" -presumably shutters- for the windows, and that many pounds of spermaceti candles were purchased for the services held "at early candle-light."

With the bricks of this second parish church -pulled down in its turn- the little red Sunday school by the mulberry tree on Church Street was built. In this homely structure, later used for the colored Sunday school and sewing school, some of us lisped our first lessons in the Infant Catechism. The present Sunday school, or parish house, was erected about 1876.

After twenty years use of the second parish church the congregation perceived that a new and larger church would be desirable. Accordingly the present church building was erected, finished in October, 1855 and consecrated by Bishop Johns on April 8, 1857. This the third church building partly occupies the site of the first or Colonial Church. According to the Rev. Thomas T. Castleman, in whose rectorship it was built, the tower covers part of the foundation of the ancient parish church, and the north wall of the present edifice was the south wall of the colonial church. The original plan of this church was a copy of the English church at Jerusalem. The wings were added in 1870 under the supervision of Architect Edwin M. Taylor. During the War Between the States, the Theological Seminary, having been driven from Alexandria, was carried on in Staunton. The "vestry rooms" of Trinity Church—little rooms, one on each side of the old chancel—were used as lecture rooms by the faculty.

The first rector of Augusta Parish Church (for the name Trinity does not occur before 1834) was the Rev. John Hindman, who, on recommendation by Governor Gooch, was accepted by the Vestry on April 6, 1747. It seems quite evident that this gentleman was a Presbyterian who had been sent by the Presbytery of Donegal in Pennsylvania to the people of Mountain Plain in Albemarle County. In the diary, moreover, of a Presbyterian minister, Rev. John Craig of Augusta Stone Church, we read, "April 5, 1747. John Hindman—this day turned his coat and now appears in the quality of Church of England parson."

Two years later he died, for we find in Will Book I (One) in the courthouse an inventory of the property of Rev. John Hindman, dcd., November 29, 1749, signed by Robert Hook, Robert Cravens and William Williams. This inventory is remarkable for the fact that besides "two minister's gowns, one book of common prayer" and sundry volumes of sermons, it contains a long and detailed list of horses—"One chestuntt stallion, one bay horse, one gray horse", etc., in all, including colts, twenty-four horses.

After an interval of nearly two years, the next incumbent was received by the Vestry on November 15, 1752—the Rev. John Jones. Mr. Jones had been recommended by Governor Dinwiddie as “a worth and learned divine”, the governor “not doubting but his conduct will be such as will entitle him to your favor by promoting peace and cultivating morality in the parish.” Of the Rev. Jones we find neither will nor inventory, and the only record that remains of him is in the meagre pages of the Vestry Book, except that twice his name occurs in the court records, both instances indicating that he was in financial difficulties. Once, his salary was not paid for more than a year. This salary, by the way, was not paid in tobacco, for the ministers of Augusta and Hampshire parishes were entitled by law to be paid in money. In place of the stipulated fifty pounds, Mr. Jones received for ten years 100 pounds annually, after which it was again reduced to fifty pounds. Virginia rectors, of course, had the use of a glebe (a plot of land associated with a parish); the Augusta parish glebe was about ten miles from Staunton and two miles south of Swoope’s Depot. From the Vestry Book we learn that in his old age, Mr. Jones was entrusted to the care and guardianship of his attorney Robert McClanahan.

From the Vestry record we learn also that curates were employed to assist Mr. Jones in his old age: first, Rev. Adam Smyth of Ireland, who later became rector of Bote-tort Parish in southwestern Virginia, and after him Rev. Alexander Balmaine, the only interesting and romantic figure to be found in our drab parish annals. A young Scotchman ordained by the Bishop of London, tutor in the family of Richard Henry Lee, he became an ardent patriot in the American cause, a member of the Committee in Staunton to draw up instructions for the delegates to the Colony Convention (Richmond, 1775) , and subsequently chaplain of General Muhlenberg's brigade during the War of the Revolution. Later he married Miss Lucy Madison and enjoyed a peaceful old age as rector of Christ Church, Winchester, having as his assistant Rev. William Meade, afterwards Bishop of Virginia.

During the disrepute into which the Episcopal Church fell after the Revolution, the Augusta Parish Church stood empty (excepting the services of occasional visiting ministers) for forty years.

Quoting a young Presbyterian preacher, Rev. Archibald Alexander, 1791, "The town (Staunton) contains no place of worship but an Episcopal Church which was without minister. It was proposed that I should preach in the little Episcopal Church to which I consented with some trepidation but when I entered the house in the evening it was crowded, and all the gentry of the town were out, including Judge Archibald Stuart who had known me from a child."

The Presbyterian congregation of Staunton "shared the parish church" between the years 1804 and 1819 according to Mr. Waddell; in 1819 the present chapel of Mary Baldwin College was finished which served the congregation till 1871.

To save the Episcopal Church in Staunton from perishing, a pious old man, Dr. William King, was ordained deacon by Bishop Madison in 1811 to hold services and catechizing in the parish church. Upon Deacon King's death about 1820, a revival of interest flamed up; a vestry was organized and Rev. Daniel Stephens assumed charge of the parish, his scanty salary supplemented by a small school, the Staunton Academy, of which he was principal.

After seven or eight years, the parish being again vacant, Rev. Ebenezer Boyden became rector, a Northern man who is said to have come here first to visit a former Yale classmate, Mr. William M. Peyton of Montgomery Hall (later of Roanoke). Mr. Boyden was remembered here chiefly because he married the daughter of the celebrated Major Daniel Sheffey. After two years of Mr. Boyden's ministry, there came for two years Rev. William G. Jackson, who sometime later in Norfolk died at his post in the yellow fever epidemic. The next rector was Rev. Fred Goodwin, ancestor of the present Bishop Co-adjutor of Virginia; then in order followed Rev. Thomas T. Castleman, Rev. James Latané, Rev. Walter Q. Hullihen, and Rev. John J. Gravatt, Jr.

The principal historic interest of Augusta Parish centers about the event commemorated by the D. A. R. tablet in the churchyard—the meeting of Virginia Assembly, or legislature, in the parish church. Driven from Richmond by the approach of Tarleton's cavalry, the Assembly fled to Charlottesville; thence warned by the famous Jack Jouett, they fled again, this time across the mountains to Staunton. Nor were they in Staunton permitted to pursue their business in peace, for tidings came that the British were crossing at Rockfish Gap, whereupon the lawmakers fled in all directions, some going as far as Warm Springs, others taking refuge in the house of a Mr. Moffett near Staunton. An oft-repeated joke of old-time Staunton was that in the skurry of alarm, when the gentlemen stood not on the order of their going, Patrick Henry galloped off wearing but one boot. The alarm, it is said, was caused by the capture and death of a British spy whom Joseph Long shot and mortally wounded. For the captive spy, seizing advantage of the moment when his guard Joseph Long was occupied in taking off his moccasins, made a vain attempt to escape by wading across Christian's Creek in his boots-and so, tho a spy, met a soldier's death. This incident was sufficient to start the rumor that the British were coming. There was great excitement at Bethel and Tinkling Spring Churches. It was even reported that there were four spies, three of whom had escaped into the forest. The rumor was momentarily confirmed by the arrival in Augusta of Lieutenant Francis T. Brooke marching from Albemarle to join the corps of Marquis de LaFayette with a body of soldiers. The fact that they wore uniforms instead of hunting shirts caused Lieutenant Brooke's company to be mistaken for British troops.

When the enemy did not appear, the legislators returned to Staunton. The Assembly were chiefly occupied during their two weeks' stay here—that Period of Depression—in enlarging the military draft and inflating the currency. For governor they elected Thomas Nelson, Thomas Jefferson's term being nearly completed. At the moment Colonel William Fleming was Acting-Governor, while Governor Jefferson, having narrowly escaped capture, was a fugitive on Carter's Mountain. On June 23, 1781 the Assembly adjourned to meet in Richmond in October following.

The spindle chair at the door of Trinity church is believed on the best evidence to be one of several borrowed from the home of the Haruf family, across the street from the church, for the use of the Virginia Assembly.

The churchyard of the parish church was used as the village burial ground for one hundred years; Presbyterians however were usually buried in the family lot in the Stone Church Cemetery or in that at Tinkling Spring Church. Negroes-slaves of course-were buried in that part of the church yard where the rectory now stands. At length, when by reason of the growth of the village the churchyard found itself the center of the "Town of Stanton" instead of "lying adjacent to" it, and when it had become so full that graves were laid upon the top of graves, a charter was secured for Thornrose Cemetery, about 1852, and in consequence no more burials were permitted in the churchyard. The earliest graves were marked with wooden headboards probably; at any rate they have all disappeared. The oldest grave extant is that of Roger North, date 1776. Presumably the bones of Rector John Jones and Deacon William King lie under the churchyard oaks, but of them nobody in four generations has seen a memorial stone.

Of the soldiers of the American Revolution buried here we know the graves of seven: Edward Valentine, Archibald Stuart, Samuel Blackburn, Jacob Peck of Pennsylvania, John Young (registered as enlisted in 1775). James Clarke (who was also a pre-revolution soldier), and Roger North, whose widow applied to Congress for pay for his services. In addition to marked graves it is recorded that Vincent Tapp and his wife, Susan Gambill, lie buried in this graveyard; it is almost certain that the horizontal covering Mr. Tapp's resting place was broken to pieces by an unfortunate accident at the time of the alteration of the church, about 1888. There seems to be no reasonable doubt that the graves of Smith Thompson, John Trotter, and Lieutenant Lawrence Tremper have lost their stones in the storm and stress of years. Probably, but not certainly, the soldiers James Robertson, Peter Lohr, Claudius Buster, Lieutenant James Hughes, and Augustin Argenbright, here also, among the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.

We are indebted for this list to the careful research of Mrs. William Wayt King of Staunton.

Of these soldiers we are told that Smith Thompson, barber by trade, boasted that he had shaved General Washington; Lawrence Tremper, a leather-breeches maker, held the office of postmaster in Staunton for forty years; Sergeant-major Vincent Tapp of the 12th Continental Regiment preceded Lieutenant Tremper as postmaster and later became the first City Clerk of Staunton. To the soldier Augustin Argenbright was assigned the important duty of keeping the horses of the mountain cavalry properly shod. Lieutenant Hughes, who was a pre-Revolution soldier, in civil life kept an "ordinary" or hotel, in the town of Staunton. Archibald Stuart fought at Guilford Courthouse, was the first president of the Phi Beta Kappa at Williamsburg, and Judge of the General Court (now the Circuit Court) for thirty years. Samuel Blackburn, who also fought at Guilford Courthouse, became a celebrated criminal lawyer and a member of the legislature; by his will he liberated his forty slaves on condition that they would emigrate to Liberia.

Real Daughters of the Revolution whose resting places may here be seen are these: Mrs. James Waddell, Mary, daughter of Colonel James Gordon. Mrs. Edmund Berkeley, Harriet Randolph Spottswood, daughter of Lieut. Francis Brooke. Mrs. Archibald Stuart, Eleanor, daughter of Col. Gerard Briscoe of Frederick County. Mrs. John H. Peyton, Ann Montgomery, daughter of Major John Lewis of Sweet Springs, Va. Mrs. Samuel Blackburn, Ann, daughter of Col. George Matthews, some time Governor of Georgia. Mrs. Andrew Barry, Margaret, daughter of Col. George Matthews above. Mrs. Joseph Smith, Elizabeth Battaile, daughter of Colonel Battaile Muse.

Of ex-service men of the War of 1812 we find buried here Lieutenant Nicolas Kinney, Captain John C. Sowers (merchant, Presbyterian elder, grandfather of Miss Mary Julia Baldwin), Anthony Weiford, Captain William Brown, William Young and Major John Howe Peyton. Major Peyton served on the staff of General Robert Porterfield.

A number of graves, old citizens tell us, lie under the present church building.

Church Street having been cut through the hill rising to the west of the church after the manner of a sunken lane, it was deemed desirable ( about 1888) to cut down that portion of the hill standing between the church building and Church Street. A beautiful grove of locust trees was thus sacrificed (also a luxuriant crop of nettles) and the tombstones of graves thus lowered were set in two straight lines, instead of being dotted about irregularly here and there as formerly; the colored Sunday school too was removed.

Among the almost forgotten tombstones are those of many wise and courageous citizens prominent in their day and generation, to whose foresight and faithfulness we owe such blessings as we now enjoy. Recalling the great and learned lawyers for which old-time Staunton was famous, are to be seen the tall obelisks of Judge Archibald Stuart, Prosecuting Attorney John Howe Peyton, and Lawyer Erasmus Stribling (for 19 years County Clerk, later Clerk of the United States District Court) .Here is also the horizontal slab of Congressman Daniel Sheffey; here too the monuments of Nicolas and Jacob Kinney, Clerks of the County and Circuit Courts; that of Chesley Kinney, another keeper of the legal records, seems to have disappeared. The obelisk of Lawyer Robert S. Brooke fails to record that he was a member of the Virginia Assembly or legislature.

In the Stuart group near the chancel wall is the grave of Judge Alexander Stuart, grandfather of the famous General J. E. B. Stuart of the Confederate army.

Men notable in a variety of callings have a very simple record on their grave stones. Dr. William Boys was the first Superintendent of the Western State Hospital for the Insane. Dr. Edmund Berkeley is said to have been the first in this part of the country to make use of chloroform in his practice. Joseph Smith, Justice of the Peace, built for his home the picturesque residence of his descendants at "Folly." Lewis Harman was proprietor of the George Washington Tavern on the site of the late Virginia Hotel. The Rev. Joseph D. Tyler was the first superintendent of the Virginia School for the Deaf (1839—1852). The Stevenson Commandery of Knights- Templars is named for Levi Stevenson. John Wise, in civil life a printer and one-time editor, fought under Anthony Wayne against the Indians on the Maumee.

Proceeding to more remote days we learn that in the year 1800, Dr. Alexander Humphreys was the only physician in Augusta County. In 1802, Andrew Haruf was a member of the first Common Council of the town of Staunton, which had hitherto been governed by trustees. About the same time Michael Garber was making nails in his iron works, a fact which must have delighted the Sage of Monticello, one of whose pet projects was "a nail factory at Staunton."

To many others in this city of the dead we are indebted, for-

"The growing good of the world is partly dependent on unhistoric acts; and that things are not so ill with you and me as they might have been is half owing to the number who lived faithfully a hidden life and rest in unvisited tombs."

The 2005 Edition

In 2005, an attempt was made to locate graves that were not listed in the early edition of this guide. During that process, it was noted that some of the inscriptions on the graves were not recorded accurately. In the 2005 edition, changes were not made to the original listings.

November 28, 1927. 17

"Mr. Charles S. Hunter,
President Thornrose Cemetery Co.,
Staunton, Va.

Dear Mr. Hunter:-

"Through the assistance of Mr. Finley Thompson and Miss Cameron Ryan, I am able to furnish a list of the tombstones in Trinity Church yard, Staunton, Va., together with a rough sketch of the ground to which the graves are referred, to be filed as a part of the records of Thornrose Cemetery.

"It is felt that owing to the conditions of the tombstones, there are probably a number of errors in this record, which it is hoped will be corrected from time to time, as attention is called to them, or as the inscriptions may be more accurately deciphered.

"The lot is filled with graves which are not now, and possibly never have been, marked by a permanent marker. As many of the records are already very faint, it seems important that a list should be made before they deteriorate further.

"There is nothing very striking about the inscriptions.

"The oldest record I notice is under date of 1776.

"Through error of the stonemason, one man is recorded as buried before he was born; and in another case the name is spelt wrong. This shows how proper names may in time become changed.

"A student from the Staunton Law School, 1835, was 'by strangers honored and by strangers mourned.'

"Several of the inscriptions are written with great literary skill and beauty.

Very truly yours,

CC/CR

CHARLES CATLETT."

affectionate husband as a just tribute of her tenderness as a mother, her sincerity as a friend, and her kindness as a mistress. As she lived in the love and fear of God; So she died supported by a firm and cheerful trust that she was exchanging this for a better world.
I heard a voice from Heaven
Saying unto me,
Write; Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; Rev. XII 15.

(East Side) I would not live always no welcome the tomb,
Since Jesus hath lain there I welcome the doom
There will be my rest till he bid me arise to meet him in triumph descending the skies.
My soul hath a desire and a longing to enter into the courts of the Lord
My heart and my flesh rejoice in the living God.

For the 2005 Edition:

Trinity Churchyard has undergone changes since the original edition of this booklet was published. New graves have been added (rectors and staff of Trinity Church and their family members). Old graves have deteriorated and been removed. Others have been repaired and returned to the yard. The research to identify the previously unlisted graves was done by Roland Micklem in June 2005. Further acknowledgement goes to Elizabeth Hogg and Susan Micklem for additional research and the redesign of the booklet.

The following are represented by graves in 2005, but were not listed in the original book.
