THE BAND DAGNABBIT! PLAYING FOR US AFTER OUR BANQUET TUESDAY NIGHT!

Dagnabbit has been helping people satisfy their fix for live music since 2006. Originally started by Pierce, Ricochet bassist Greg Cook, and local drumming mainstay Terry Salyer, the musically-diverse collective has had various members since it's inception, but the core line-up for the past few years has been Ryan Pierce on vocals/fiddle/guitar, Chuck Dowden on guitar/vocals, Tim Smith on bass guitars, Johnny Griffith on keyboards/vocals, and Joe Rodriguez on sound. The drummer on this particular night was Marcus Jones, a newcomer to the group with only a couple of shows with the band under his belt.

To describe the Dagnabbit band musically would be a challenge, as they will tackle just about anything, across any genre, in order to entertain at the particular event they're playing. They play weddings, fundraisers, private parties, as well as local venues like Leon's Steakhouse and Saloon in Longview or the Back Porch in Kilgore. If you had to pin them down to a summary description, they'd be a party band that specializes in good times wherever they go. Just as comfortable tackling Charlie Daniels as they are taking on Jason Aldean. Equally as proficient with such funk classics "Play That Funky Music" as they are with R&B hits "Purple Rain" and "Easy Like Sunday Morning." As likely to play Garth Brooks as they are the Rolling Stones or Elton John, Dagnabbit setlists are designed to move with the mood of the crowd and play toward how they respond. Sound engineer Joe Rodriguez says, "The vibe that the guys have on stage is a feeling that anything is possible at any time, so you don't know what might happen next. It certainly keeps me on my toes at the sound board."
