Twenty thousand men spent six years building a railroad. Some started in lowa and headed west. Others started in California and worked east. By 1869 the last spike was finally pounded into place. The East and West were linked. After that, many more railroads were built. The railroads joined every part of the country. The folk song "I've Been Working on the Railroad" became very popular.

Most buildings are made from many pieces. Can you imagine a building made from just one block of stone? If you travel to Lalibela in Ethiopia, you will see some very old churches. They are carved out of solid rock. Some of them were hewn into the side of a mountain. Others were made by cutting straight down into the rock from the top of a hill. First the outside of the building was cut from the rock. Then the inside was hollowed out. Windows and decorations were also carved. The buildings are about 900 years old. They are still used today.
