About Public Health England

Public Health England exists to protect and improve the nation's health and wellbeing, and reduce health inequalities. We do this through world-leading science, knowledge and intelligence, advocacy, partnerships and the delivery of specialist public health services. We are an executive agency of the Department of Health and Social Care, and a distinct delivery organisation with operational autonomy. We provide government, local government, the NHS, Parliament, industry and the public with evidence-based professional, scientific and delivery expertise and support.

Introduction and overview

The Research, Translation and Innovation (RTI) division has been working with PHE centres to strengthen links between public health academics and others across the public health system via research workshops to explore public health research needs and priorities in their local areas.

Over the last 18 months, we held 4 such meetings:

- North West Research Workshop Manchester 4th October 2016
- East Midlands Research Workshop Nottingham 13th March 2017
- East of England Research Workshop Cambridge 3rd October 2017
- West Midlands Research Workshop –Birmingham 14th November 2017

There are 2 more planned for the 17/18 financial year; in the Yorkshire & Humber and South East and discussions are underway with other areas in the hope to cover each of the 9 PHE centres by the end of 18/19 financial year.

These regional workshops have included an overview of research priorities from different stakeholder perspectives; PHE Centre, Local Authority and Clinical Commissioning Groups, along with an opportunity for discussions, workshops and a Dragon's Den session with pump priming funds available to enable local research projects to be further developed.

Each of the workshops has been developed with input from a lead in the PHE Centre, the Head of Academic Public Health Support in the RTI division and an academic or other public health professional colleague(s).

In addition, the RTI division has supported the PHE national teams of the Dental and Oral Health team and Chief Nurses Directorate in creating and supporting meaningful academic networks. Further information about these workshops is available on request and this work will continue in future years.

This is the report for the West Midlands Research Workshop; which was developed by Soili Larkin, Consultant in Public Health (Healthcare Public Health and Workforce), PHE West Midlands, Andrea Shilton, Research Delivery Manager, NIHR Clinical Research Network West Midlands, Nathan Smith, NIHR Clinical Research Network West Midlands, Professor Tony Stewart, Clinical Research Specialty Lead for Public Health, NIHR Clinical Research Network West Midlands and Nicola Hodgkiss, Head of Academic Public Health Support, Public Health England.

Attendees

There were 70 attendees, made up of academics and public health practitioners from the West Midlands region along with some voluntary sector and patient representatives. Appendix 1 shows the list of attendees with their employing organisation.

Research needs and priorities in the region

We heard about research needs and priorities for the region from 4 different perspectives:

- Professor Antony Stewart, Clinical Research Specialty Lead for Public Health, NIHR Clinical Research Network, West Midlands
- Professor Rod Thomson, Director of Public Health, Shropshire County Council
- Dr Kiran Patel, Medical Director, West Midlands, NHS England
- Dr Jane Moore, Director of Prevention and Wellbeing, West Midlands Combined Authority.

A table at the end of the document gives a summary of the research needs highlighted.

Themes

Reassuringly and perhaps unsurprisingly there were some common themes in the presentations. These are as follows:

- Better collaborations; making best use of all available resources, including skills and knowledge as well as funding
- Increased community/public engagement
- Translational research to ensure research is relevant and accessible to practitioners.
- Consideration on how fit for purpose current research activity is and how the hierarchy of evidence should be considered.
- Health economics (Return on Investment) was seen a particularly important in order for research to make a difference to the pressures the system is facing
- Better utilisation of existing data
- Utilisation of behavioural science

Presenters and an overview of content

(copies of the slides can be found on phe.gov.uk as an appendix to this document)

Dr Sue Ibbotson, Centre Director for the PHE West Midlands welcomed everyone to the event and introduced the day's vision for bringing people together from across the region to explore the PH landscape in West Midlands and understand more about local research needs.

Dr Felix Greaves, Deputy Director for Science and Strategic Information at PHE gave an overview of PHE and where it sits in the public health landscape as well as providing a high level summary of PHE's Research Strategy: 'Doing, supporting and using public health research: the Public Health England strategy for research, translation and innovation'. He also introduced the concept of 'ResHubs' which are part of PHE's response to the Health of the Public 2040 report that recommends the development of regional hubs of engagement between practitioners and researchers to integrate health of the public research and health and social care delivery; events such as these research workshops are part of that work.

Dr Andrea Shilton, Research Delivery Manager at NIHR Clinical Research Network West Midlands outlined the work of the Clinical Research Networks (CRN) with a focus on how the CRN West Midlands can support researchers across the region with their research proposals.

Dr Christopher Parker CBE, Managing Director of West Midlands Academic Health Science Network (AHSN) talked about the work of AHSN nationally as a catalyst for bringing together academic and service to adopt innovative practice. He highlighted some areas of work that the West Midlands AHSN is focussing on at present, namely:

- Wellness and prevention
- Long term conditions
- Mental Health
- Genomics and personalised medicine

Professor Kate Jolly, Professor of Public Health and Primary Care, University of Birmingham provided information about the Collaborations for Leadership in Applied Health Research and Care West Midlands (CLAHRC WM). This included background to the CLAHRC WM but also a summary of their current work which covers:

- Maternal and child health
- Youth mental health
- Prevention and detection of diseases

Chronic diseases

These are then supported by 2 cross cutting themes; Implementation and organisational studies and research methods.

The day also had 2 parallel workshops:

- Barriers to research and how to overcome these; facilitated by Professor Kate Jolly, Professor Public Health and Primary Care, University of Birmingham and Professor Antony Stewart, Clinical Research Specialty Lead for Public Health, NIHR CRN West Midlands
- How to translate research into practice and a showcase of local translational public health research; facilitated by Judy Kurth, Centre for Health and Development, Staffordshire University and Stoke-on-Trent City Council and Staffordshire County Council. Dr Katherine Brown, Reader in eHealth and Wellbeing Interventions, Coventry University and Public Health Warwickshire

The discussions again highlighted the importance of making academic research more accessible for frontline practitioners.

There was also an honorary contract surgery with Nicola Hodgkiss, Head of Academic Public Health Support, Public Health England for anyone with questions relating to honorary contracts with PHE.

Dragon's Den session

As part of the day, we invited researchers to pitch ideas to a panel in a Dragon's Den type exercise. We advertised this opportunity on the event website and asked interested parties to submit an abstract of their proposals. There were three pitches made to the panel:

- 1. Helen Pitsson, Harper Adams University in collaboration with Jude Bailey at Fit4All Exercise and Sports Therapy: Chair-based exercise classes: Positive steps towards increased independence in our older generation
- 2. Maria Clarke, University of Birmingham in collaboration with Birmingham Community Healthcare Foundation Trust and Women's Aid: Abused Women: Awareness, Recognitions and Empowerment (AWARE)
- 3. Maria Murphy, University of Warwick in partnership with Coventry City Council: Development of a healthy menu labelling scheme in schools

The panel was made up of Dr Felix Greaves, Deputy Director for Science and Strategic and Information, Public Health England, Professor Antony Stewart, Clinical Research Specialty Lead for Public Health, NIHR CRN West Midlands, Professor Rod Thomson, Director of Public Health, Shropshire County Council and Dr Jane Moore, Director of Prevention and Wellbeing, West Midlands Combined Authority.

The £5,000 prize money was awarded to Marie Murphy and the project will provide a progress report in 12 months' time to PHE's pump priming panel.

Next steps and conclusion

It was clear from speakers and comments on the day that there is already a welldeveloped infrastructure in the region but that better use of those infrastructures could be made to have a bigger impact public health in the region. Questions on the day covered whether some of the approaches to public health more generally are too rigid and/or no longer fit for current purpose and maybe more innovative thinking how we work in this area would be beneficial.

The working group that came together to help set up this workshop will work on an action plan to take some of the emerging themes forward.

Summary of research priorities from different perspectives

Academic	Local Authority	STP	Combined Authority
Recognition of public health research in all funding schemes – many set up for NHS research	More collaborations – making better use of all resources (funding/skills/knowledge) available	Increased collaborations – working together, suing all expertise to achieve a single aim	Economic growth that will benefit all parts of the West Midlands
Large population based studies	Relevant research that makes a different to local government	Translational research	Healthy workforces
Increased awareness of the Clinical Research Network and support that it can offer	Translational research that impacts policy and practice	Better use of data and information to target healthcare interventions – explore use of data by other sectors, can we replicate this in the NHS?	Vibrant communities
	Better access to data	Return on Investment – Making the economic case for research/interventions	Prevention and early intervention
	Increased public involvement	Whole system approaches	Mental Health
			Engaging communities to understand the inequalities
			Evaluation of interventions Building collaborations
